Hinduism, a popular term for Vedic-dharma or Sanatana-dharma, is the world's oldest living faith. Yet it is not a religion in the narrow, sectarian sense since dharma, derived from the root dhri which means to uphold, sustain or support, is a much wider term connoting both the moral law and the law of one's being, the path of worldly pursuits (pravritti) and the path of quiescence (nivritti).
