Waiting Analysis - eNotes.com

A kind of Chinese Dr. Zhivago about a married army doctor who falls in love with a nurse during the Cultural Revolution, by Chinese exile Ha Jin (In the Pond, 1998, etc.). Starred-crossed lovers are the meat of tragedy the world over, and when political upheaval is thrown into the same pot, you're almost guaranteed a pretty substantial stew. The focus of misery here is Lin Kong, a Chinese ...

WAITING | Kirkus Reviews

One can appreciate how author Ha Jin was deftly able to present sympathetic characters here. Despite his committing a despicable act in divorcing a good wife, we can still feel badly about Lin Kong's plight. Ultimately the novel is about desire and waiting for its fulfillment. Lin Kong desires a woman who thrills him mentally and sexually.
